An argument between two men turned deadly at a Gonzales County residence north of Nixon early Sunday, May 28. According to Gonzales County Sheriff's deputies, the GCSO received a call at 12:54 a.m. Sunday about shots being fired in the 100 block of County Road 168, which is off Texas Highway 80 near Clear Fork Creek, north of the Nixon-Smiley High School campus.

Upon arrival, deputies found one man who had been the victim of a gunshot wound and who was later pronounced deceased on the scene. The victim was later identified as Jose Robles Quintana.

A second individual who had been assaulted was transported to Brooke Army Medical Center (BAMC) for treatment of injuries. That person was identified as Samuel Garcia-Mendiola, who was also identified as the person who had shot and killed Robles Quintana.

Garcia-Mendiola was later arrested and charged with murder and is currently being held in lieu of $750,000 bond.

The incident is currently being investigated by the Gonzales County Sheriff's Office Criminal Investigations Department and The Texas Rangers.

Duderstadts donate family Bible to Jail Museum

BY VANDY VAN EPPS
Gonzales Inquirer

The Gonzales County Jail Museum on Friday, May 26, added a new item to its exhibits that has ties to a historic outlaw.

The museum will open a special exhibit of outlaw-turned-attorney John Wesley Hardin. Museum Director Sandra Wolff said even though Hardin was never held in this particular jail, he did open a law practice in Gonzales and defended people incarcerated in the jail.

Wolff said this story is an example of other stories, especially "young men who grew up and catered to their manhood after the Civil War."

"John Wesley saw firsthand some of the things that the authorities that were put in place to tell the southerners they lost the war. There was some violence and I think it really affected him and he began to hate the authorities that were here. And so, that kind of led to what we all commonly say his outlaw career," Wolff said.

Wolff pointed out that there are two sides of Hardin's history — one being

Rivas family takes center stage in 'The Sleeping Beauty'

Reignited passion for dance leads mom, daughters to join company

Gabriela, Jessica and Alexandra Rivas

Three members of the same family will be gracing the stage when Come and Take It Dance and The Crystal Theatre present "The Sleeping Beauty" later this month.

Performances will be at noon and 7 p.m. June 10 and 2 p.m. June 11 at the Crystal Theatre. Tickets can only be purchased online at comeandtakeitdance.com for $30 per person and there will be assigned seating.

Jessica Rivas, a passionate dancer, started her ballet journey at the tender age of 3 in Brownsville, Texas, under the guidance of Mr. Juan Burgos at Bella's Artes Academy. Her training continued there until she ventured off to college at 18. During her college years, she took a hiatus from dancing, focusing on building a family after getting married.

Despite her busy schedule as a mom of five and handling the bookkeeping for her husband's pediatric practice, Jessica always yearned to share the beauty of ballet with her daughters. Unfortunately, the absence of dance studios in her town made it challenging. However, everything changed when she discovered Come and Take It Dance last year.

Inspired by her meeting with Gary, Jessica made the bold decision to reignite her passion for dance after a 27-year hiatus. She knew she had found the right place. In November, she started taking classes again and, recognizing the opportunity, also enrolled her two daughters. Now, the three of them embark on their ballet journey together.

Amidst the responsibilities of motherhood and her professional obligations, Jessica finds immense reward in dedicating time to herself and indulging in the joy of dance. She encourages others to join her in ballet, emphasizing that age or experience level should not deter anyone.

Ballet is not exclusively for little girls in tutus — it is a captivating art form that everyone can appreciate and benefit from. Not only does ballet offer physical activity, but it also improves posture, relieves stress, and brings immense fun and fulfillment.

Jessica's story serves as an inspiration, proving that one can always rediscover and embrace their passion, regardless of life's demands. She encourages individuals of all walks of life to join her on the ballet journey, as the transformative power of dance knows no bounds.

Gabriela Rivas is a talented and driven 14-year-old who recently completed middle school with honors. Her passion for music is evident in her skillful piano playing, which she has been practicing for several years. Gabriela's love for the arts extends beyond music, as she has always dreamed of dancing ballet. She finally found the opportunity to pursue her passion in Gonzales and has been making impressive progress in just six months of training.

With her dedication and talent, Gabriela is sure to continue excelling in all of her artistic pursuits and is looking forward to her first performance in "The Sleeping Beauty." She will be dancing alongside her mother, Jessica Rivas, and younger sister Alexandra.

Alexandra Rivas, an energetic 8-year-old, has just completed second grade with flying colors. She is a multi-talented young girl who is currently involved in cheer and gymnastics lessons, as well as piano and ballet classes.

Alexandra's love for music is evident in her passion for singing, and she enjoys exploring different genres. In addition to her artistic pursuits, Alexandra also enjoys playing softball and staying active. She is thrilled to be performing in "The Sleeping Beauty" alongside her mother, Jessica, and sister, Gabriela, and is excited to showcase her talents on stage. With her boundless energy and enthusiasm, Alexandra is sure to continue shining in all of her endeavors.

McGinty inducted into IOCS Hall of Fame

SPECIAL TO THE INQUIRER

Lt. Col. Kenneth McGinty

On April 30, 2023, family and friends gathered at the country home of Kenneth Sekula to celebrate the posthumous induction of Kenneth "Kenny" McGinty of Gonzales into the Infantry Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame at Fort Benning, Georgia, on May 1, 2023.

A catered meal was served, friends reminisced with stories of the Kenny they knew growing up in Gonzales, viewed several displays around the area showing the many facets of Kenny, and Bill McCaskill presided over a very moving Missing Man Table ceremony. Kenny was nominated based on his military service, his civilian contributions, and his dedication and service to his community.

Lt. Col. Kenneth McGinty was nominated by another Hall of Fame member Col. (retired) Brice Barnes, in co-ordination with members of the 2nd/47th/9th Infantry Divisions. Kenny was chosen for this honor as an acknowledgment of his superior leadership in command positions as well as for his heroic actions during the Vietnam War. For those actions, he was awarded two Bronze Stars for Valor, two Purple Hearts, the Combat Infantryman's Badge, the Vietnam Cross of Gallantry, five Air Medals, the Army Aviator of the Year in 1986, and many other awards too numerous to mention.

Kenny's military service also included being an Airborne Ranger in the 75th Ranger Battalion, serving two combat tours in Southeast Asia, and serving in the Army Staff at the Pentagon.

When Kenny transitioned into a second career, he didn't stop contributing to others. As a program manager and VP for Lockheed Martin in the defense aerospace industry where he led and coordinated the development of the Apache helicopter. Kenny flew the Apache, which he named after the local mascot, on one of its first flights to share it with the community of Gonzales.

Kenny never forgot his roots in Gonzales and never stopped giving back. He helped several in FFA, brought the Apache helicopter to town for all to see, helped organize the Come & Take It Tommy Chenault Memorial Golf tournament fundraiser to honor those lost in Vietnam through scholarships in area communities, and offered ROTC support in GISD. Kenny never turned down an opportunity to speak to the public. In 2019 he was named the parade marshal for the annual Come & Take It celebration.

Kenny McGinty passed away at the age of 77 on June 24, 2022.

He is definitely a true patriot and a hometown hero recognized for service to his country and his community by being inducted into the OCS Hall of Fame in Ft. Benning, Georgia. We salute him and thank him for his service.

Gardening Calendar for June

It has been a good spring for wildflowers unless you are in the Central Texas area centered on Bexar County. Even then most wildflowers did well except for the bluebonnets. Because of the continuing drought in that area the bluebonnets did not bloom or produce seed well. As we go into June the fire wheel, rain lilies, coreopsis, sunflowers, and bee balm are still blooming well. Resist mowing the seeds down as long as you can. Even the bluebonnets could return to full production next year if the rains return in the fall and support the germination and growth of the supplies of bluebonnet seeds that are waiting on the soil for the right timed moisture.

Many lawns made a miraculous recovery this spring and will be heading into June in a state of recovery. Some communities are still in drought restrictions but if you have access to water or if the rains continue it may even benefit to provide fertilizer this month, it is later than we usually fertilize but if you use a slow-release lawn fertilizer to a recovering actively growing lawn, it will benefit the grass.

In the vegetable garden cucumbers, eggplant, okra, and peppers have been doing well. Some gardeners have had problems with spider mites in their tomatoes. If your plants are still clean of the pests it will probably be wise to apply a seaweed spray to the foliage. If you had a problem with the summer squash fending off the vine borers, put a note on your calendar for next year to try tatum squash. It is not susceptible to vine borers and can be used for the same recipes as the summer squash.

Zinnias, moss roses, and vinca are providing color in the sun garden, Penta and begonias are doing well in the shade. The Monarch butterflies have migrated through our area on the way North to Canada. Keep working on growing some native milkweed to provide egg laying options this fall and especially in the future spring visits. Tropical milkweed is also a favorite nectar source and egg-laying site. Also consider planting mistflower, zinnias, salvias, and lantanas for nectar sources for the butterflies. The Monarchs will be back this fall but in the meantime the nectar plants will support the hummingbirds and the other butterflies such as Queens and swallowtails.

Garden Q&A

Texas red oak is the fastest growing oak variety

Q. Which is the fastest growing oak species? What is the most susceptible variety to oak wilt?

A. In most situations Texas red oak is the fastest growing oak variety, but the red oaks are also the most susceptible to oak wilt disease except that they don't have an inclination to interconnect root systems like live oaks. The white oaks such as bur oak, Monterey oak and chinkapin oak are the least susceptible to oak wilt. In fact, they rarely would get the disease.

Q. Is there any miticide to prevent spider mites on tomatoes? My Thunderbird tomatoes were overwhelmed by spider mites this spring. The Ruby Crush eventually were also covered but not until we had harvested a bountiful crop

CALVIN FINCH
 Gardening Q&A

A. Spraying on a seaweed spray works to decrease the reproductive rate of spider mites but other available sprays are not very effective. Another tactic that has some impact is to make sure the weeds are cleared from around the plants.

Q. What is the pest or disease that wiped out my snapdragons earlier this spring. It looked like aphids or some other small bug. Was there a way I could have prevented it? They were blooming so beautifully.

A. The usual disease that infects snapdragons in the spring when the weather warms is rust. Rust is a fungal disease and very difficult to prevent. It does resemble aphids in some ways. When rust shows up on snapdragons most of us move on to replace the snaps with zinnias!

Q. What is the best way to speed up decomposition of organic material to make compost?

A. There is a relatively long list of techniques to speed up the process. Start by chopping up the raw material into small pieces. The raw material mix should be at least 50% green material and you should keep the pile moist. Adding nitrogen fertilizer or manure also speeds up the process.

Texas 4-H Roundup to attract youth for education, competition

Texas 4-H Youth Development Special to the Inquirer

About 2,000 youth and family members of the Texas 4-H program statewide will converge on the Bryan-College Station area June 5-8 for the annual Texas 4-H Roundup. The roundup is hosted by Texas 4-H Youth Development, part of the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension Service.

As a part of the Texas 4-H Roundup, students and their families from across the state will be on the Texas A&M University campus in Bryan-College Station from June 5-8. (Texas A&M AgriLife photo by Sam Craft)

Texas 4-H Roundup is an annual invitational and qualifying event for 4-H youth who placed in a district-level contest or signed up to compete in one of its invitational events.

Texas A&M AgriLife faculty and staff from across the state and within the Texas A&M College of Agriculture and Life Sciences will be on hand to assist with the event.

"The Texas 4-H Council chose 'Define' as this year's theme, as they thought about what the program meant to them and what it could mean for younger 4-H'ers," said Montza Williams, Ph.D., Texas 4-H Youth Development program director.

"Members have the opportunity to define their goals, achievements, friendships and memories as they process through every level of the program," Williams said. DR. DON NEWBURY
The Idle American

Parents in the Dark...

Prayers of university presidents and school superintendents for commencement exercises to be executed as planned often are short-circuited.

Some leaders are extremists--the kind who decree that neither blaring air horns nor unseemly yells will be tolerated. Their wish is for "pomp" to be exceeded only by "circumstance." Often, they experience countless "slips 'twixt cup and lip."

On occasion, though, commencement "foul-ups" are trumped by what may well be "Acts of God" that ascend to the peak of memories' mountains....

One recently occurred in Nacogdoches, TX, home of Stephen F. Austin State University. Hours after Mother Nature lashed out, a series of graduation exercises were scheduled for various university schools.

Around 1 a.m., a strong thunderstorm struck. Several trees crashed earthward, severing powerlines. At least one darkened what is arguably East Texas' most beautiful hotel. (The Fredonia Hotel, built in 1955 by Nacogdoches residents, was returned to opulence in 2017. That's when Richard and Barbara DeWitt gave it a multi-million dollar make-over.)

Loss of electricity meant more than darkness. It meant no elevators, no room service, no restaurant, no gift shop. Essentially, "no nothing"...

The Fredonia was packed with graduates' parents and other relatives, all filled with thanksgiving when their slumber began, wondering soon what "God hath wrought."

Earlier, lobby chatter between a few fathers of graduates agreed that "Acts of God" might be needed for their hard-to-motivate offspring to get diplomas.

Some may have just begun dreams of thanksgiving--thinking of sacrifices made, financial burdens borne and frustrations endured--now seemed worth the price. At least they'd have one memorable night at a top-tier hotel to remember....

It seems unlikely that my wife and I would not only be witnesses, but also participants, on this peculiar night at the Fredonia. We were in town to spin stories at a banquet of the Primetimers (senior adult group) at First Baptist Church.

We had yesteryear thoughts about things that went wrong during my "handing out" a few thousand diplomas at dozens of commencement exercises across two decades.

Gallows humor or not, we laughed while getting things together at 6 a.m., still engulfed in darkness. Only cellphone flashlights lit our way. I couldn't find my mouth to brush my teeth without jaw movement, so I told myself a joke. Luggage in hand and assisted by a friend, we made our way down five flights of stairs. Thankfully, safe descent was made possible in near total darkness by beams of cellphones--the very devices we've railed against so many times....

Only later did we learn that critical technology had gone afoul during one ceremony. Graduates' names--recorded earlier to ensure correct pronunciation--could not be summoned from their technological hideout.

Time was of the essence, so a real live person was enlisted to recite several hundred names, few of which he'd ever seen before. Dr. Tom Webster, FBC worship leader, accepted the challenge.

Long-time Nacogdoches folks may have remembered a statement often made by one of their favorite sons, nationally renowned after dinner speaker Bob Murphey. He claimed to speak "fair English and perfect East Texas." Some graduates from country--whose languages have no vowels but lots of syllables--may disagree....

Dr. Newbury, longtime university president, writes weekly and speaks to educational, church and business groups. Contact: 817-447-3872. Email: newbury@speakerdoc.com. Facebook: Don Newbury

The Gonzales United soccer club took on Lion Club FC Sunday, May 28, at the Schertz Soccer Complex in Schertz, Texas.

Gonzales United kicks off club soccer

BY VANDY VAN EPPS
Gonzales Inquirer

Soccer continues with the arrival of the Gonzales United soccer club, which began its first weekend of play Saturday, May 20.

The Gonzales United kicked off their second week Sunday, May 28 in Schertz, Texas and faced the Lion FC soccer club.

David Ontiveros, head coach Gonzales United, got the program going with help from Gonzales Apaches FC head coach Shea Seip.

“The soccer program got started because Coach Seip got here and he wanted to improve the whole environment in Gonzales. There’s a lot of kids that play soccer here in town, but they don’t get the experience coming out here and seeing this competition,” Ontiveros said.

Ontiveros added this is a stepping stone and the program is going in the right direction.

The 2023 Gonzales United soccer club.

Seip said it began when he asked Gonzales Youth Soccer League if they have spring soccer. When he learned they did not, he decided to bring soccer to Gonzales. “With the club, not only do the players get to be on a select team and play all over the state, they get exposure to just how big of a soccer world there is outside of Gonzales,” Seip said. Seip added that with club soccer, it’ll help these players progress when they enter the high school level, instead of learning soccer from day one at the high school program.

“They would already know that and be better prepared, especially with the district and the stuff that we do, playing the San Antonio schools. They just have a lot more resources than we do, so it’s narrowing the gap,” Seip said.

As the head coach, Ontiveros is looking forward to these players learning the fundamentals of soccer with the club.

“They’re still young to where they’re getting the foundation of seeing competition like this, so when they get to junior high or get to high school, they can actually have, you know, something that solid to build off of,” Ontiveros said.

Free Fishing Day slated for June 3

SPECIAL TO THE INQUIRER

Each year on the first Saturday in June, anglers across the state pack their tackle boxes and get their fishing poles ready for the Texas tradition of Free Fishing Day. This year, Free Fishing Day lands on June 3 and Texans can fish on any public waterbody in the state without a fishing license.

“Free Fishing Day is a wonderful opportunity for anglers to share their knowledge, skills, equipment, and love for fishing with a new participant, yet it’s also more than that,” said Craig Bonds, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) Inland Fisheries Director. “We hope those trying fishing on this special day will also learn that purchasing a license is an act of conservation. A fishing license purchase is one of the simplest and most effective way people can support fisheries science and management.”

Anglers help the conservation effort with their license purchase with 100 percent of fishing license fees going to TPWD. The fees fund on-the-ground conservation efforts such as fish stocking that help make Texas one of the best places in the country to fish. For more information on licensing, visit the TPWD license page.

To help celebrate Free Fishing Day, TPWD offers multiple resources to provide fun, high-quality fishing opportunities to anglers of all skill levels and all ages.

• Fishing 101 - Learn the basics of fishing with tips and a variety of videos. Find resources for how to get started, safety, supplies and gear, casting and baiting, cleaning and storing fish on the TPWD Learn to Fish webpage.

• Visit Texas Freshwater Fisheries Center - Grab your family for a day of free fishing from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Texas Freshwater Fisheries Center is offering free admission for everyone, and visitors will have a chance to catch a tagged catfish and win a prize during “Fish Tag Friendly”. In addition, the Texas Fish Art Contest finalist and honorable mentions will be displayed from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Visitor Center. Hot dogs, hamburgers and drinks are on sale beginning at 11 a.m. Visitors can watch the dive show at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., followed by hatchery tram tours after each show. Visitors may bring their own fishing tackle or borrow gear from the TFFC.

• Visit Sea Center Texas - Grab your fishing poles, bait and lawn chairs for a free fishing event for youth ages 2-17. It takes place from 9 a.m.-11 a.m. June 3 at Sea Center Texas in Lake Jackson. Visitors can also explore aquaria and exhibits of Texas marine life, the largest red-fish hatchery in the world, 36 one-acre fish culture ponds, an outdoor wetland exhibit and a 20-foot touch pool that allows visitors to gently touch marine animals such as blue crabs, hermit crabs, stone crabs, snails and even anemones.

• Find a Place to Fish close to Home - Texas offers numerous lakes and rivers with access to fishing throughout the state. The Lake Finder page on the TPWD website can help anglers find lakes by region or alphabetically. Access to information and fishing tips on more than 150 lakes are available. Check out the River Fishing page to find out where to get access to Texas’ flowing waters.

• Saltwater Fishing from a Pier - There are numerous wheelchair accessible piers available for public use up and down the coast. Public access sites can be found in every bay system.

• Community Fishing Lakes - Live Oak City (CFL), Waterloo Park Pond (CFL) and William Blair Jr. Park Pond East (CFL) are all hosting special events for Free Fishing Day. TPWD Inland Fisheries Dallas-Fort Worth District staff will be on hand at William Blair Jr. Park Pond for Representative Crockett’s Fish N’ Kids event from 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. TPWD staff will provide casting education, supply loaner tackle and help the families fish.

• Fish in a State Park: Lake Livingston, Lake Arrowhead, Galveston Island, Sea Rim, LBJ, Bonham, Eisenhower, Martin Creek and Ray Roberts are offering a variety of Free Fishing Day events. Check out the state parks event calendar for more information. Although June 3 is designated as Free Fishing Day in Texas, fishing is free year-round at every Texas State Park.

• Buy a License: The Year-from-Purchase All-Water Fishing Package for Texas residents offers a great value, allowing anglers to fish in fresh and salt water. It’s valid from the date of purchase through the end of the purchase month of the next license year. (Example: License purchased on March 13, 2023 expires March 31, 2024)

Mission Possible

So, how are you doing today? Very well I hope, but if not, hang in there, you're not done yet, and are certainly not alone. Another opportunity to exercise our faith can only make us stronger, renewing our hope in tomorrow. It seems that keeping our hope alive in times of adversity is not only a daunting task, but an intense full time job as well. Those of us who follow Christ have a distinct advantage, as God's power is far greater than our own, but for those who don't, you may want to turn your gaze in that direction, you won't be disappointed. Scriptures that have encouraged me along the way are Isaiah 40:29 "He gives strength to the weary and increases the power of the weak" and Psalm 29:11 "The Lord gives His people strength; the Lord blesses His people with peace." Judging by today's opening, you're probably assuming that I'm having a tough go of it myself. Well kinda, but not really, I'll explain. This article marks five years since Eloise passed away, and by no coincidence, five years since I stepped in and started writing these short, hopefully encouraging articles, to honor her legacy and continue what she started many years ago. She also "loved you guys".

Having survived (just barely at times) the first five years of my personal (everyone processes somewhat differently) grief journey, I encourage anyone that has-is-or will go through this horrendous process to hang in there, as it will get easier with time and healing. Always striving to be the glass half full kinda guy, it was hard to tell if I was sad because I was depressed, or depressed because I was sad? Seems the jury's still out on that one. Either way, clinging to God and working through the process has definitely paid off, as I'm doing much better these days. The truth of the matter is that loosing a loved one sucks!!! It's something we never really "get over", as when they die, an important part of ourselves dies with them. To me, this easily falls into the "Post Traumatic Stress Disorder" category. After being traumatized and stressed to the outer limits of our coping abilities, we find that our lives have been completely upended and are now in total disorder. I honestly remember very little of the first few years after she passed, as it felt like I'd been hit in the face with an anvil, knocking my sense of reality completely out of whack. My very first article was entitled The New Norm, and a half decade later...I'm still trying to figure it out.

ERIC ESTES
Love, Eric and Eloise

I just watched an excellent movie on Netflix starring Tom Hanks about a man navigating through his own battle with grief. Of course with Hanks playing the main character (Otto) it was very well done, and I could definitely relate to his struggle, but be warned, it's not for people in a dark state of depression as the movie was very intense, so please give that some thought before watching. For me it was simple; God first - understand that there is light at the end of the tunnel - keep busy moving forward and take care of yourself, as you'll need your strength for the battle ahead.

Grieving the losses of life, while taking many different forms, is never quick, easy or pleasant. Whether someone chooses to believe it or not (your own personal choice), I do believe that you were specifically created out of love, with a purpose and plan for your life. Yep, "Mission Possible - if you should choose to accept it". So, put God in your corner, strap on your coolest Tom Cruise glasses, and complete your journey with all the gusto you can muster, 'cause you just never know where the the next chapter could take you!

Love you guys, Eric.

Cleto loved to barbecue, he could easily prove his barbeque chicken was the best. He loved spending time barbecuing for his friends and family and shared his love for them with his food. Cleto was also a kid at heart, playing with all of the kids in the family brightened his day. His pride and joy was his only grandson, "Pablito", he was there for every sports game and activity, and tried to influence Pablito to be more like him. He was a generous man to say the least, often times when he'd visit family from Mexico he'd return with only the clothes he had on, he would give what he could to his family back home. Cleto was loved by his family and friends, he leaves behind an emptiness that his family is feeling, but they know they will meet with him again one day.

A Cleto le encantaba hacer carne asada, podía demostrar fácilmente que su pollo asado era lo mejor. Le encantaba pasar tiempo haciendo carnes asadas para sus amigos y familiares y compartía su amor por ellos con su comida. Cleto también era un niño de corazón, jugar con todos los niños de la familia alegraba su día. Su orgullo y alegría era su único nieto, "Pablito", él estaba allí para cada juego y actividad deportiva, y trato de influir en Pablito para que se pareciera más a él. Era un hombre generoso, por decir lo menos, muchas veces cuando visitaba a su familia de México, regresaba solo con la ropa que tenía puesta, le daba lo que podía a su familia en casa. THERESA YVONNE CANALES

Theresa Yvonne Canales was born on Oct. 17, 1971, in Ft. Cavazos, Tx, formerly known as Fort Hood, to Margarito and Esperanza Martinez Canales, the fourth of their six children. An Army brat, Theresa's childhood and elementary school years were spent traveling in Europe. Those experiences instilled in her a passion and curiosity for learning about different cultures which deepened throughout her life. She wouldn't have time to learn all that she wanted to know-which was everything-but she filled her time learning all she wanted to know.

The world would always be her classroom and she would always be an enthusiastic teacher and insatiable student.

At Ellison High School in Killeen, Tx. from where she graduated in 1989, Theresa was a popular cheerleader and obo player. She enrolled in Incarnate Word College (now the University of the Incarnate Word) with the intent of becoming a nun. She changed her mind on that career path but still wanted to be an educator, graduating in 1994 with a Bachelor of Arts in English and a Texas Certification for Secondary English & Writing Education (Life).

Theresa's work in community engagement and political activism began as an undergraduate at Incarnate Word. Though never the nun she'd once envisioned herself, Theresa's live and work was one of service, of living out her faith to do good for others. Driving her work was her belief that people should do better by one another and take care of each other.

Education, community service, and politics were the avenues she used to channel this passion. Most important to her were children, their health, safety, education, and development. If they were to grow into compassionate and well-informed adults, they needed all the education she and other teachers could give.

Her teaching stints included being a Reading/Language Arts Teacher and Language School Teacher for District-wide Middle School Programs in the Edgewood Independent School District and All Level ESL & 6th Grade Classroom English Teacher at Brooks Academy of Science & Engineering (K-12). But Theresa knew she could increase her impact on her students by having an impact on the policies which would shape their lives and she knew her way around committee rooms as well as classrooms.

During the Texas House of Representatives 75th Legislative Session in 1997, she worked for State Representative Irma Rangel who chaired the Texas Committee on Higher Education. Theresa was that committee's clerk who was responsible for organizing and disseminating information to committee members. She also researched bills and drafted analyses, speaking points and correspondence of behalf of the committee chair. Among the local elected officials who Theresa worked with in some capacity was Congressman Charlie Gonzalez, Mayor Ed Garza, State Rep. Mike Villarreal, County Commissioner Tommy Calvert Jr., City Councilwomen Rebecca and Phyllis Viagran and Mayor Ron Nirenberg.

Upon learning of her death, Nirenberg said, "She was an incredible person, so generous with her knowledge. I think about her often because she was one of our small circles who advised me on how to run for office. She taught me how to block walk. May she rest in peace."

Her extensive community service included but wasn't limited to being a volunteer coach for Girls on the Run of Bexar County; kitchen volunteer at Haven for Hope and St. Vincent de Paul; former board member for Planned Parenthood Government Affairs Council; Volunteer Adult ESL/Citizenship Teacher at the Valasquez Literacy & Leadership Development Center (City of San Antonio.) There wasn't much which Theresa wasn't interested in or couldn't do. She not only loved cooking, gardening, calligraphy, astronomy, botany, religious practices of various cultures, science, art, literature, music, Shakespeare, and history but could speak knowledgeably on these. She was a talented cook, writer, musician, artist and she developed websites and designed, coded, and developed databases.

But Theresa's greatest gifts was her zest for life and endless capacity for love. This beautiful and petite smiling force of nature was a source of light, good cheer, and strength for all who knew and loved her. And there are many.

A few years ago, her friend, world-famous poet Naomi Shihab Nye, immortalized Theresa (who sometimes dropped the 'h' from her name) in a poem, "You Are Your Own State Department"

"When your country does not feel cozy, what do you do?"

Theresa walks more now, to feel closer to her ground. If destination within two miles, she must hike or take the bus. Carries apples, extra bottles of chilled water to give away.

But at the center of her life was her love for children. She was a mother to all the children in her life and had a special relationship with each of her nieces and nephews.

Theresa passed away on May 25. At the time of her death, she was the Outreach Coordinator for St. Mary's University. She was preceded in death by her mother Esperanza Martinez Canales.

She is survived by her father Margarito Canales and stepmother Mary Canales, sisters Laura Morales (Jose Morales), Graciela Canales (Andrés Luna) and brothers Herman Canales (Megen Canales), Christopher Canales, and Adam Canales (Sandra Canales). Her nieces and nephews Christina Trentzsch, Bobby Canales, Magdalena Canales, Emily Canales, Marcos Canales, Andrés Canales, Clarissa Canales and Adrián Canales; great-nephew and great-niece Julian and Araceli Herrera and so many other family members and loved ones.

A visitation will be held Sunday, June 4, 2023, from 5:00pm - 7:00pm at Seydler - Hill Funeral Home, 906 St. Paul St. Gonzales, Texas 78629, with a rosary following at 7:00pm. A Mass of The Resurrection will be held Monday, June 5, 2023, at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Gonzales, Texas at 10:00am. Interment will follow at St. James Catholic Cemetery in Gonzales, Texas.

A memorial service in San Antonio will be held at a later date.

All services are under the care and direction of Seydler - Hill Funeral Home.

Insurance for RVs: Know your coverages

Who doesn't love a camping trip in the great outdoors to soak in the sun and listen to the birds chirping? Before you pack up the RV, check your insurance to be sure you're covered for whatever the road may bring your way.

- Travel trailer insurance
Travel trailers or fifth wheels are pulled with a truck. Your auto insurance might pay for accidents you cause while pulling the trailer.
But you probably need a separate RV policy or endorsement to cover damage to the travel trailer itself. Ask your insurance agent or company.
- Motor home insurance
Motor homes are drivable and aren't pulled by a truck. Texas law requires you to have an auto policy with liability coverage for your motor home to pay for accidents you cause.
To pay for damage to your own motor home, you'll need collision and comprehensive coverage. That also pays for damage caused by things other than a collision, like fires, floods, and theft.
- Coverage for the stuff inside
You'll need a RV policy to cover personal property inside your travel trailer or motor home. Your home policy might pay some, but the coverage is very limited. Ask your agent how much coverage you have and if you can buy more.
- Living in your RV
If you live full time in your RV, consider buying "full-timers coverage." Full-timers coverage includes personal property and liability coverage. Liability coverage pays for others.

OBITUARIES

JESSE NELLE REID HAHN

Jesse Nelle Reid Hahn, 88, of Pleasanton, passed away on Tuesday, May 23, 2023. Born to Tillman Jesse and Elizabeth Scoggins Reid, on July 16, 1936, she grew up in Gonzales and graduated from GHS in 1952. Two days after Nelle turned eighteen, she and Herbert Hahn were married. The newlyweds moved to Waco, where Herbert worked for the U. S. Postal service; then, soon afterward, the fledgling family (that now included son Jim), ministered and worshiped with a succession of Texas churches: Troy, Schertz, Victoria.

From Victoria, they launched out into overseas missions, traveling to Amsterdam, the Netherlands, where they remained for half a decade. Upon returning to the States, the couple (with children Jim and Lori in tow) settled in Vanderbilt, Texas. As Herbert transitioned from ministry into insurance sales, Nelle worked in the advertising department of the Edna Herald newspaper. She would go on to interact with students of Industrial ISD as an elementary classroom aide, a librarian, and a lunch-room attendant. While living in Vanderbilt, the family adopted their third child, Karen.

From 1970 to 1982, Nelle served as the Industrial 4-H chapter leader, teaching classes, overseeing projects, manning booths, and creating award-winning Jackson County Fair displays. In 1985, the Hahns moved to Gonzales where they would live (and ranch) for thirty-two years in the house Nelle had designed. During those passing decades, Nelle applied herself to work, to church, and to family. She labored at Gonzales House, a care home for special needs adults. She owned and managed the local Merle Norman studio. She built sheds and refinished furniture. She taught women's Bible classes and poured her heart into Seydler Street Church of Christ's annual VBS. She organized and orchestrated the lion's share of her high school graduating class's reunions - up to and including 2022's 70th annual gathering. And, of course, she provided her special brand of attention to her nine grandchildren.

After Herbert's passing six years ago, Nelle moved to Pleasanton to live with Karen and her family. She continued to engage in the activities that interested her - attending grandsons' sports events, reading, painting, and writing stories drawn from memories of her youth. Jesse Nelle Reid Hahn was a woman of integrity -- scrupulously honest, often strong-willed, always opinionated. She was a perfectionist, an artist with a literalist's eye for verisimilitude. Within her beat an empathetic heart for God's "little ones" - ever tender, unabashedly emotional, completely unpretentious. She spoke and taught and lived like the Bible "says what it means and means what it says." A daddy's girl to the core, she loved her family unconditionally, and was equally at home walking a cow pasture, crossing a busy street, mixing a batch of holiday dressing, or cradling a fussy baby. Nelle embodied Scripture's proverbial woman of noble character, who "fears the Lord"; and of whom it is said: "Her children arise and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praises her. Many women do noble things, but you surpass them all" (Pr 31:28-29). Recently, Nelle had decided to move to Highland Estates, an Austin-based retirement home. She lived there only a matter of days before making her final journey heavenward.

Jesse Nelle Reid Hahn is survived by three children, Jim Hahn of Waco, LoriAnn Hahn Lavallee of Austin, and Karen Hahn Fuselier of Pleasanton; nine grandchildren: Beth Hahn, Rachel Dacke, Colton Fuselier, Colby Fuselier, JoLyn Hahn Kile, Caroline Hahn Gray, Travis Lavallee, Sarah Nelle Lavallee, and Caden Fuselier; grandchildren-in-law Dylan Kile, Summer Fuselier, and Todd Gray; two great-grandchildren, Kayce Fuselier and Lennon Kile; one daughter-in-law Jan Smithy Hahn; two sons-in-law Robert Fuselier and Kirk Lavallee; brother, T. J. Reid, Jr., and sister-in-law Pat Reid; nieces Kay Tolbert Drescher and Darla Reid Hadley; nephew Mark Reid; and numerous cousins. Preceding her in death were her husband Herbert, her parents, her sister Evelyn Reid Tolbert, and brother-in-law Arthur Tolbert.

Visitation is scheduled from 5 to 7 p.m., Monday, May 29, at Seydler-Hill Funeral Home. Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m., Tuesday, May 30, also at Seydler-Hill Funeral Home, with her son Jim Hahn of Waco officiating. Interment will follow at Gonzales Memorial Park Cemetery. Pallbearers will be her grandsons, as well as her sons-in-law. Her five granddaughters will serve as honorary pallbearers.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to the Sunny Glen Children's Home, San Benito, Texas.

All services are under the care and direction of Seydler - Hill Funeral Home.

Sesame Study Club installs new officers

SPECIAL TO THE INQUIRER

The Sesame Study Club met at the Robert L. Brothers Memorial Library on May 24, 2023. Hostesses Linda Arledge and Sandra Miller greeted the members with a Memorial Day red, white, and blue-decorated table of refreshments, including raspberries, strawberries, blueberries, pecans, cheeses and crackers, and Ross's cookies from Bluestem.

President Celia Glass called the meeting to order, led the group in the collect, and called for officer and standing committee reports. Treasurer Laura Kaspar reported thank you notes from the Library for Sesame Study Club's honorariums, given in the names of each program presenter this year, and for the Club's donation to the Friends of the Library.

The Library is a special interest of the club, and the monthly report by Christina Menking of the Library Committee showing how much our community uses the library is of great interest. Last month, 5,512 patrons walked through the doors of our library and 1,065 visited the Tinsley Historical Center. Users checked out 1,364 books, 431 videos, and 357 e-books. Internet was used by 245 and 47 new library cards were issued. The City of Gonzales purchased 128 new books, Friends of the Library added 6, and 9 were donated.

Joan Griffin of the Book Club presented Sandra Richter's book, "The Epic of Eden," a highly acclaimed Old Testament study. She gave the members a copy of the timeline included in the book that she has found helpful in her Bible study. Parliamentarian-Critic Linda Arledge guided the members to a clear understanding of the three types of Sesame Club memberships, and that led to agreement on future actions.

Dana Hamilton of the Good Cheer Committee thanked President Celia Glass for her leadership this year and, in appreciation, presented her with a pin, engraved with her name, President 2022-2023, and Sesame Study Club. President Glass then announced the new officers: President, Lynn Gescheidle; Vice President, Melinda Grady; Recording Secretary, Jenice Benedict; Corresponding Secretary, Kim Strozier; Treasurer, Karen Fougerat; Historian, Linda Arledge; Press Reporter, Diana Fougelle; Parliamentarian, Celia Glass.

Sesame Study Club then adjourned until Wednesday, September 27, 2023.

Fun By The Numbers
 Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test.

Here's How It Works:
 Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

“As a freshman, you came in a little nervous and excited at high school. And then, in March of 2020, COVID happened, and we shut down school. We were unaware of what was going to happen, or how school was even going to look,” Basha said.

Basha joked with the seniors one last time and told them they still have to make up those nine weeks they’ve missed from freshman year.

“All joking aside, I’m honored to be able to stand here in front of you today, your last day as a student for GISD, and your first day as a GISD alumnus. I will ask that you always remember where you come from, and never forget to tell your story,” Basha said.

Cooper LaBuhn was named the valedictorian of the class of 2023, and Maria Vazquez was named Salutatorian.

“The day is finally here where we celebrate the journey that we embark on throughout our years at Gonzales,” Vazquez said. “We as a class have a lot to be proud of as we reminisce on our years at Gonzales High School.”

Vazquez said she was blessed to be part of this year’s graduating class of 2023 and knows after ceremony they’ll part ways and begin their separate lives.

“You will be faced with many challenges, but I truly believe that every one of us is more than capable of overcoming anything that comes our way. These challenges will allow us to continue to grow and to create a life you’re proud of,” Vazquez said.

Valedictorian LaBuhn reminded his fellow seniors to remember the great experiences that shaped at Gonzales

“It’s important to remember the experiences that shaped us throughout our years of high school. Maybe it was sports, maybe it was band. Maybe it was academics. Maybe it was spending time with your friends,” LaBuhn said.

“As we gear up to leave this all behind, think about what or who made you the way that you are. What shaped you into the graduate that you are today?” LaBuhn added.

Class president Haley Bairrington closed out the graduation ceremony with the moving of tassels.

“As we embark on our greatest years of our lives, to open new chapters in this very special way, something I believe very strongly that this is the greatest class to graduate from Gonzales High School.” Bairrington said.

Bairrington, LaBuhn, Vazquez and the class of 2023 remembered their classmate Morgan Farrar, who would’ve graduated with them had she not passed away several years earlier.

“I wish Morgan was here to celebrate with us. I know she’s looking down upon us from heaven,” Bairrington said.

One hundred and ninety-four seniors graduated from the class of 2023.

Hegar announced he will send cities, counties, transit systems and special purpose districts $1.2 billion in local sales tax allocations for May, 4.3 percent more than in May 2022.

These allocations are based on sales made in March by businesses that report tax monthly and sales made in January, February and March by quarterly filers.

For the month of May 2023, Gonzales County municipalities received a combined $333,596.78 in sales tax allocations, up $14,541.57 or nearly 4.56 percent more than the $319,055.21 received during May 2022.

For the year, county municipalities have received $1,577,749.67, an increase of $104,510.42 or almost 7.1 percent above the $1,473,239.25 received through the first five months of 2022.

Sales tax allocations for Gonzales, the largest city in the county which generates the lion’s share of sales tax revenue, were $288,129.58, up $7,321.37 or 2.66 percent above the $274,808.21 received during May 2022.

This sets a new record for the month of May in Gonzales and is the eighth best month on record for the city since the Comptroller’s Office began keeping track of sales tax allocations.

For the year, the city has received $1,333,712.40, up $53,681.93 or 4.19 percent, above the $1,280,030.47 received at this same point in 2022.

Waelder received a total of $12,486.23, up 65.58 percent or $4,943.74, above the $7,540.49 received in May 2022. This is the second-best total for sales tax allocations for any month in Waelder history, a little less than $3,900 behind the record $16,327.73 the city received last month.

For the year, Waelder has received $59,701.37, up $27,293.49, or 84.21 percent, above the $32,407.88 received at this point in 2022. In the past two months, the city has collected $28,813.96 and the city is just $25,075.20 off the record $84,776.57 it received in all of 2022.

Finally, Smiley’s sales tax receipts were $3,432.85, up $835.45, or 32.16 percent, from the $2,597.40 received in May 2022. For the year, the city has received $15,025.74, up $2,597.48 or 20.89 percent above the $12,428.26 received in the first five months of 2022.

Three cities in Gonzales County — Gonzales, Nixon and Waelder — collect a 1.5 percent sales tax rate, while Smiley collects a 1 percent sales tax.

new book, a book full of unknowns," she said. "This book will contain new adventures and challenges that will help us continue to grow. Even though change can be scary, I know we're gonna be all fine."

Gutierrez De La Rosa mentioned the challenges she faced as a newcomer not only to Waelder, but to the United States. She not only has graduated at the top of her class but will be moving on to attend a university this fall despite English not being her native language.

"When I moved to the United States, it was not just a simple geographical change; it was also a lifestyle change," Gutierrez De La Rosa said. "This change was specifically significant because I didn't know the language."

She said at first she struggled with her schoolwork and felt badly for herself, but thanks to the intervention of some of her teachers, she began to learn English and her grades improved steadily. She quoted her mother, who likes to say that "if you have an ability, you can show it regardless of adverse circumstances."

Her advice, especially to her younger siblings and relatives, was simple: "Do not let anyone tell you you can't do it, and if they do, prove them wrong. The satisfying part is proving them wrong."

In closing, Gutierrez De La Rosa told her fellow graduates to "light a candle for your dreams and complete them, even if it takes a long time and it's a hard road. Remember that every day is an opportunity to change your life and be who you want to be."

Elizabeth Godinez Perez, the class salutatorian, told her fellow students this was a day they had all been waiting on for many years.

"Graduates, we have all been waiting for this day to come. After all these tough years of learning and hard work, we've managed to be where we are today," Godinez Perez said. "You should all be proud of yourself for getting to this point in your journey. We have made great memories, long lasting friendships, that will never be forgotten."

She thanked the teachers at Waelder ISD for "for putting up with us through all these years. But on a serious note, thank you for expanding our knowledge and showing us that we can be so much more than where we live."

She reminded graduates that "this is not the end of our journey."

"This is only the beginning. We will achieve good things and live life to the fullest," Godinez Perez said. "We can never know what can happen at any moment, so use your time well. Do the things you love and conquer your life your way."

Waelder High School social studies teacher Kaitlin Steger, the keynote speaker for graduation, told the students they are "paving a new path into your futures."

"You're eager and probably nervous about pursuing your interests and embarking on a new path. But honestly, you should be confident in taking this next step," Steger said. "You persevered and deserve all the successes that life has to offer. It can be easy to worry about the future, to worry about how the new generations will carry the burden of social and civic responsibilities into whatever struggles may arise. But I can take a deep breath and not worry so much, because I know that you guys will be out there."

"And I know that you'll make a difference. I know you will strive to act with compassion and empathy," Steger added. "You already recognize the struggle for justice, and that it's an ongoing pursuit that is absolutely necessary and worth the struggle. You know the reward might not always be immediate. And even if your act of integrity, so unwitnessed doing the right thing will always be worth it."

Steger challenged the graduating class to "recharge and refocus all your effort and commitment from the last four years to succeed, succeed in whatever path you choose. carry all your compassion, wisdom and justice into the future. We're kind of depending on you."

Principal Ashley Taylor read biographies for each senior during the processional and later would award scholarships and present the class for certification to superintendent Dr. Ron Lillie, who recognized the businesses in the community who contributed to the 2023 graduating class and also told students when it was time to symbolically move their tassels from right to left to observe the rite of passage to graduate.

Diplomas were awarded by Taylor, Lillie and the WISD School Board.

Student openings were delivered by Makayla Medina (English) and Annette Rangel Ramirez (Spanish) while the student closings were delivered by Vanity Hernandez (English) and Yesica Ramos Zelaya (Spanish). Lorelei Moreno led the pledges to the American and Texas pledges.

best and grow by expanding their boundaries."

COMPETITIONS, WORKSHOPS AND CAREER FAIRS

Roundup is held on the Texas A&M University campus and other places in Bryan-College Station and will include around 50 diverse competitions and 12 educational workshops that tie in with the many projects 4-H has to offer.

Participants can also attend a College Career Fair, participate in a statewide community service project and interact with trade show vendors. Additionally, the Texas 4-H Youth Development Foundation will award more than $2.7 million in scholarships to 227 youth.

The week-long event will begin the afternoon of June 5 with the College Career Fair and Trade Show, as well as a Say Yes to FCS signing presentation for future family and consumer sciences educators, state officer candidate speeches and high-energy kickoff activities.

June 6 begins the three days of contests, followed by evening assemblies in Reed Arena. The evening assemblies will consist of an awards ceremony from that day's competitions, the recognition of scholars and volunteers, live music and other activities.

Roundup attendees can enjoy hotels, shopping, local attractions, and food and beverage establishments throughout the week in the Bryan-College Station area.

Participating students and their families look forward to roundup every June and travel to Bryan-College Station from counties across Texas, Williams said. Not only does the Texas 4-H Youth Development Program create lifelong memories for those involved, but its members also gain leadership and problem-solving skills that equip them to navigate their future.

"The first week in June is always a great time to come together to celebrate Texas 4-H - our members and volunteers," Williams said.

his good friends who took care of his two children.

Those good friends would be Fred and Henrietta Duderstadt, who took care of Hardin's wife and three children while he was serving in prison.

When Hardin's wife passed away, the Duderstadt family would adopt the three children as their own.

Wolff said during that time, there were always some good people around to take care of other people, especially children and wives who had no way to make a living.

Jump to the present: the Duderstadt family took part in the ceremony to tell both sides of Hardin's history and the placement of their lost and found family Bible.

The Bible went missing for many years and was discovered in 2015. Janell Duderstadt, great-great-great daughter of Fred and Henrietta, said she received a Facebook message with a picture of the Bible with her great-great-great grandparents' names on it.

The Bible was returned to the family and is now on display at the jail museum.

and women in and out of uniform,” Castro said.

Castro graduated Nixon-Smiley High School in 1995, but in 1993, in his junior year of high school, he joined the Army under its split-option program under the Army reserves.

“This is a surreal moment for me, considering that a short 30 years ago, I was here running the streets as a pestilent little boy with no direction and now I am in front of all you today as senior Army officer,” Castro said.

The ceremony honored service members who came from Nixon, and included Gold Star family Joseph and Pauline Villanova, whose son, Cpl. John Longoria, died in combat in 2005 in New Ubaydi, Iraq.

“The Gold Star lets the community know that their service member died or was killed while serving their country. Today we continue that tradition recognizing and supporting the families of our service members, our Gold Star Families,” Castro said.

Castro and the Vil-lanovas — together with Nixon Mayor Dorothy Riojas, DeLaCruz and retired Army Natividad Ruiz — placed wreaths in honor of those service members from Nixon who made the ultimate sacrifice for their country.

Castro closed out the ceremony, paraphrasing a passage from Charles Province:

“It is the service member, not the minister who has given us freedom of religion. It is the service member, not the reporter, who has given us freedom of the press. It is the service member, not the poet, who has given us freedom of speech. It is the service member, not the campus organizer, who has given us freedom to protest. It is the service member, not the lawyer, who has given us the right to a fair trial. It is the service member, not the politician, who has given us the right to vote. It is the service member who salutes the flag, who serves beneath the flag, and whose coffin is draped by the flag, who gives us our blanket of freedom.”

very much in attendance in spirit — also were awarded diplomas.

The district recognized the achievements of Anthony Rene Acuna and Gianna Sophie Jewett, both of whom passed away before they could walk the stage with their classmates. Flower arrangements placed on the front table by the podium were dedicated to their memory.

The dearly departed were very much on the minds of valedictorian Cecilia Villasana and salutatorian Jennifer Vasquez, who mentioned them in their addresses to those present.

“First and foremost, Gianna, Anthony — I’m talking to you, too,” Villasana said. “Y’all may not physically be with us right now, but your spirit surrounds us. In this beautiful moment, it will remain with us for the rest of our days. We love you dearly.”

Villasana noted that the class has “experienced so much — both together and on our own.”

“We’ve gained loved ones lost some and then gained others,” she said. “We’ve made every grade possible from zeros to a hundreds. We’ve had good times and bad times, wins and losses. But if there’s one thing that can be said about the past, it is that you can’t change it. You can only learn, heal and grow from it.

“And then you get to the present,” Villasana added. “You can do a million different things to control your own destiny. With every second that passes, your present becomes your past and your future becomes your now. Homework, parties, friends, family, sports, band, work, FFA, clothes, money, jobs, college, or 1,000 different things to think about — but there’s one thing that many of us forget and that is to stop and smell the roses. By this, I mean taking a moment to appreciate where we are.”

She told her classmates that while it may not be easy, “the fruits of our effort will be worth it.”

“As all of us have proven, we are strong,” Villasana said. “We’ve overcome challenges, both spoken and unspoken. And the years to come are no match for the power that we all possess to take control of our lives and make them our own.”

“Our time here as the senior class of 2023 is over. High school has been one heck of an experience,” Vasquez said in her salutatory address. “We have experienced loss, hardships, and moments of joy and achievement. As a class, we experienced beautiful moments together as well as times that shaped who we are today.

“Today marks an important milestone — the start of our future. I hope that we all follow our dreams and reach our goals despite all the obstacles we may face in the future, and may we not give up when times get tough.”

Vasquez thanked her “guardian angels from heaven, who have guided me, especially my best friend Gianna, who I know is here with us today and is watching over us as we prepare to graduate tonight.”

She spoke with pride about the impact Mr. Garces had on her life when he introduced her to a pre-college program with the University of Texas at Arlington, where she spent the summer after her junior year, strengthening her academic skills.

As a result of her hard work, Vasquez will be the first in her family to go to college. She will be attending the University of North Texas on a Terry Foundation scholarship valued at $223,200, or $27,900 per semester for eight semesters.

“Thinking of a full ride scholarship sounds great, but being debt free, it is so difficult to earn. Who doesn’t want a full ride scholarship? Right?” Vasquez said. “You think about it and it seems so far away and impossible.

“Well, guess what? I’m here to tell you that it is not impossible. I still cannot believe I earned a full scholarship to attend my dream school. This opportunity was made possible through years of hard work and perseverance. To those we leave behind, don’t stop working or persevering, because hard work truly pays off. If you want it, work for it. Even if you don’t reach your desired goal, the skills you will learn along the way will open doors to opportunities you never even imagined.”

Natalee Mendez, the fourth highest ranking senior, delivered the invocation, while Ana Vasquez, the third highest ranking senior, gave the welcome. Sebastian Ortiz, the fifth highest ranking senior, delivered the farewell.

Principal Jim Weaver presented the senior class while superintendent Jeff Van Auken and the N-SCISD board of trustees presented diplomas to the graduates.

Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar reminds families to save for higher education

Special to the Inquirer

Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar is encouraging families to save for their children's higher education expenses using the state's 529 college plans.

"As we come to the end of another school year, all of us with school-age children are reminded just how fast the time flies," Hegar said. "It's also a reminder that now is the perfect time to start saving for college by opening a 529 account, or even contributing to an existing plan. Families will find that when it comes to planning for their children's future education, starting early is key and every little bit adds up."

Texas offers three tax-advantaged 529 plans: the Texas College Savings Plan® (TCSP) and the LoneStar 529 Plan® (LS529), both college savings plans, and the Texas Tuition Promise Fund® (TTPF), a prepaid college tuition plan. The plans are known as 529 plans because they are authorized by Section 529 of the Internal Revenue Code.

TCSP and LS529 allow families to save for college by investing in one or more portfolios, either by enrolling in TCSP directly or in LS529 through a financial adviser. The college savings plans may be used to pay for qualified education expenses at schools nationwide and even at some foreign schools. The college savings plans are open for enrollment year round.

TTPF helps families lock in today's rates for all or some future undergraduate resident tuition and schoolwide required fees at any two- or four-year Texas public college or university, excluding medical and dental institutions. TTPF newborn enrollment is available through July 31 to lock in 2022-23 prices for children younger than one year of age; general enrollment begins Sept. 1 to lock in 2023-24 prices. Texas residency requirements apply.

The Texas Prepaid Higher Education Tuition Board administers all three 529 plans through the Comptroller's office.

For more information about the Texas 529 plans, visit SaveNowForCollege.com or call 800-445-GRAD (4723). Select Option 3 for the Texas College Savings Plan, Option 4 for the LoneStar 529 Plan or Option 5 for the Texas Tuition Promise Fund.

Debunking the non-traditional higher-education stigma

TEXAS NEWS SERVICE Special to the Inquirer

Many college students balance family and work responsibilities with academics - making non-traditional higher education a lifeline to a future degree and career. But high school counselors do not always encourage students to go that route.

The COVID-19 pandemic and subsequent lockdown boosted interest in distance learning, according to Sue Subocz, associate president and provost of Walden University.

Many students who transfer from community colleges to online learning, which opens up higher education to a group of people who might not otherwise get to participate, she said.

“Getting that foundation - really understanding - if you’re going to make your way through the rest of the degree, it’s just going to facilitate that process of earning that bachelor’s later,” Subocz said. “You don’t have to start there to end there.”

Walden offers online nursing programs leading to bachelor’s, master’s and doctoral degrees, Subocz said, positions that need filling in Texas, which is now short about 30,000 nurses - a number expected to double by 2032, according to the Texas Nursing Association.

Jacinto Ramos, who completed his Doctor of Education degree through Walden, said the college’s mission statement aligned with his lived experience and professional goals.

“I did have one semester where I fell off - life got so hectic - and I recall the phone calls I was getting from Walden personnel - checking in on me, making sure that I was OK, so that social emotional support meant the world to me and helped me get back on track the very next semester,” Ramos said.

Subocz said there are still stigmas associated with non-traditional forms of higher education, even those schools are a significant contributor to a diverse and multicultural workforce population.

“You can start in a place where class size is often half, a third, a quarter of what you’re going to see at a university with highly qualified faculty and that it comes at about a tenth of the cost - it just makes you wonder why everyone doesn’t do it,” she said.

According to the American Association of Community Colleges, community college graduates dominate certain professional fields, including those of health and security - which includes 80% of all law enforcement officers, EMTs, and firefighters.

Study finds racial, gender gaps in students' college plans

PUBLIC NEWS SERVICE
Special to the Inquirer

A new survey of 25,000 high school seniors finds 74% say they want to go to college - but only 66% expect to enroll. The nonprofit YouthTruth found the 8% percent gap widens to 14% for Native American students, 10% for Native Hawaiian or Pacific Islanders, 9% Hispanics, and 8% for African American students.

Que Dang, executive director of student equity and success at Pasadena City College, says COVID and the resulting job losses disproportionately hurt families of color - causing college dreams to suffer.

"A lot of it has to do with folks really struggling with different stresses that are happening throughout their lives. So, it's not just around education, but it's around mental health, getting jobs; it's also around trying to provide for their families," Dang said.

To make it easier for students to afford to attend, all community colleges in California now have a Basic Needs Center that can help with rent, food and mental-health supports. There is also a statewide network of mentors, including some that specifically work with African American male students.

The survey also finds 83% of female high school seniors aspire to go to college, and 77% believe they can actually go - while only 68% of their male counterparts want to go to college, and just 57% believe it is a real option. Part of the difference can be blamed on societal norms that discourage men from seeking help, according to Dang.

"A lot of them don't want to ask for help," Dang explained. "And so they don't seek out services in the same way as women. And there are so many support systems to help them get through college, but they have societal pressures, like men wanting to 'do it themselves.'"

The report also finds the percentage of seniors expecting to attend a four-year college has held steady at 46% over the last three years, and that Black students are increasingly under-represented on community college campuses.

Colleges are dropping the SAT in admissions

Why that's a good thing for most girls

BY NADRA NITTLE, EDUCATION REPORTER
The 19th

This story was originally published by The 19th

More than two-thirds of colleges and universities won't require the SAT for 2023 admission. That includes elite institutions such as Harvard and Stanford as well as the University of California system, which has dropped the test as an admission requirement permanently.

For SAT critics, test-optional admission at colleges and universities took far too long to become prevalent. The test has been accused of putting students from underrepresented communities of color at a disadvantage for years. Less known is that boys have consistently outscored girls on the test, a pattern that dates back decades, underestimating girls' future college grades.

"The SAT test and other standardized tests claim that their value is in predicting college grades," said Bob Schaeffer, executive director of FairTest: National Center for Fair & Open Testing. "Despite the fact that young women get lower scores on the test than young men, they earn higher grades when matched for identical courses in college than the boys."

Here's what we know about the test and the gender gap.

WHAT IS THE SAT?

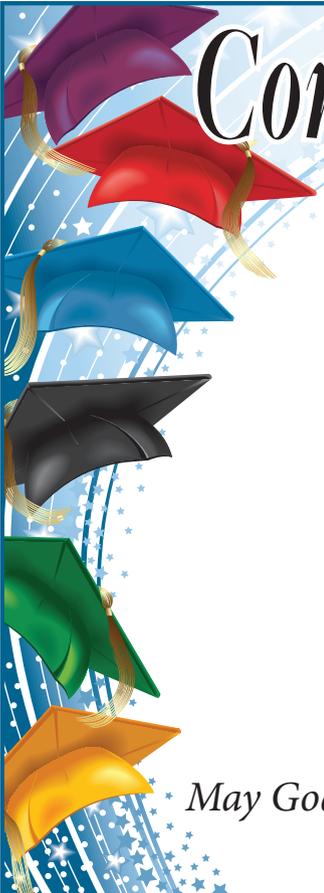

Princeton University psychology professor Carl C. Brigham invented the SAT. Brigham was a eugenicist who published a 1923 book called "A Study of American Intelligence" that analyzed, by race, the results of IQ tests given to World War I Army recruits. Brigham feared that academic achievement in the United States would decline as the country became more racially diverse. After publishing his book, he developed his own version of the Army IQ test and administered it to first-year students and prospective students at Princeton and Cooper Union, respectively.

Then, the College Entrance Examination Board, which started in 1900 with 12 presidents of top universities to administer college entrance exams and standardize the admissions process, tapped Brigham to devise an exam that a broader group of schools could use. Now known as the SAT, that test was first administered to high school students in 1926.

It would take until 1952 for the Educational Testing Service to develop the SAT most familiar to the public today. That exam included a verbal section that tested students' reading comprehension skills, understanding of analogies and antonyms, and aptitude for sentence completion questions. Today's test also includes a math section made up of questions that draw on students' ability to solve algebra, geometry and other problems. Scores go up to 1600.

Victoria College announces innovative plans, UHV partnership to address regional nursing shortage

Special to the Inquirer

Victoria College officials recently announced that new plans are underway to help address the regional nursing shortage, including a new hybrid track within VC's Associate Degree Nursing (ADN) Program and a partnership with the University of Houston-Victoria that will allow students to complete the ADN Program and UHV's Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) Program simultaneously.

Both initiatives are aimed at providing greater flexibility and accessibility to students pursuing nursing careers while meeting the demand for highly skilled nurses.

"Victoria College is committed to providing the trained and educated workforce needed in the region," said Dr. Jennifer Kent, VC President. "I commend the Dean of Allied Health and her team for their innovative plan to make nursing school a reality for more community members who have to work to provide for their families."

VC currently offers two options for students pursuing an associate degree in nursing, which is required to become a Registered Nurse (RN). Students who have no prior nursing experience can enroll in the two-year ADN Program, which is offered face-to-face, while students who have already become Licensed Vocational Nurses (LVNs) can enroll in a one-year transition program that includes an online component for lecture courses.

Similar to the transition program for LVNs, the new hybrid track will offer new nursing students the flexibility of online lectures combined with in-person skills training at VC's state-of-the-art Health Sciences Center and clinicals at affiliated healthcare facilities.

"We are excited to offer the convenience and flexibility of online learning while maintaining the essential hands-on components provided through clinicals and skills exams," said Darla Strother, Dean of VC's Division of Allied Health. "VC recognizes the evolving needs of today's students, and the new hybrid track will allow us to better accommodate the needs of those who work and have diverse schedules. Many of our students are parents themselves and juggle real-world responsibilities in addition to the rigors of being a student."

In order to accommodate the additional clinical spaces needed for students enrolling in the new hybrid track, VC plans to incorporate some evening and weekend rotations into the clinical schedule for all its allied health students.

"It has always been essential for our healthcare students to gain hands-on experience during our clinical partners' busiest daytime shifts," said Strother. "That is certainly still the case, but we are now strategically broadening our clinical experiences to include some evenings and weekends."

In addition to the hybrid track, VC plans to partner with UHV to offer a concurrent program that provides a streamlined pathway for nursing students to earn both an Associate Degree in Nursing (ADN) and a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN). Under the new partnership, students will have the opportunity to enroll in VC's two-year ADN Program while simultaneously being admitted into UHV's four-year BSN Program.

In the nursing pathway, it is common for students to complete a BSN to position themselves for future job advancement into leadership roles.

"A BSN degree is a window of opportunity for students. It provides a pedestal for progressing to graduate degrees," said Dorothy Thomas, Clinical Assistant Professor and Director of the UHV Nursing Program. "In addition, our UHV and VC concurrent nursing program gives prospective nursing students an initial BSN Program opportunity, which increases nursing students and the nursing workforce. As nurse educators, we strive to be a model of excellence and provide nurses with all the necessary educational services."

Students who enroll in the new concurrent program will complete their prerequisites and program of study courses at VC in two years and will then enter the ADN Program at VC while simultaneously enrolling in UHV's online BSN courses. Upon successful completion, students will be eligible to take the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX) to become a registered nurse and will have the opportunity to obtain their BSN degree at the same time.

"The nursing shortage in our country is critical, and its impact on smaller communities is significant," said Thomas. "This partnership is long in the making and sets a goal of increasing nurses in our community and surrounding communities. We take pride in our community; therefore, our students at both institutions are our pride."

Dr. Daniel Cano, Chief Medical Officer at Citizens Medical Center and a member of VC's Board of Trustees, agrees the nursing shortage is not going away anytime soon.

"The introduction of a new hybrid track in VC's nursing program as well as the college's partnership with UHV to introduce a concurrent ADN-BSN program demonstrate VC's commitment to addressing this challenge with innovative solutions," he said.

The VC Foundation has also received a generous donation from the M.G. and Lillie A. Johnson Foundation to fund additional scholarships for students pursuing health careers.

Victoria College is accepting applications through June 1 at 4 p.m. for its Fall 2023 cohort of ADN Program students. Applications are also being accepted for VC's one-year Vocational Nursing Program, which will begin in Jan. 2024. The deadline to submit the application and required documentation is Oct. 1 at noon. For more information or to apply for either nursing program, visit VictoriaCollege.edu/HealthCareers.

of students were taking the SAT. But the Educational Testing Service did not secure its biggest client — the University of California system — until 1960, after years of courting. Since then, the SAT has become a tradition for college-bound teenagers, but it's a tradition that has yielded different outcomes for girls than for boys.

WHY HAS THE SAT FACED ACCUSATIONS OF GENDER BIAS?

Evidence of a gender gap surfaced as early as 1985, when Ms. Magazine ran its first article on the topic. Ten years later, a University of California, Berkeley, study found that the SAT underpredicted girls' academic achievement in college by as much as 140 points. The test's gender gap has never closed. In 2017, Art Sawyer, founder of Compass Education Group, which trains students for standardized tests, conducted an SAT score analysis to find that "proportionally 45 percent more males are in the 1400-1600 score range" than girls.

Some have pointed to girls' historically lower math scores on the test to explain the gap. In their 2009 book "Still Failing at Fairness," David Sadker and Karen Zittleman note that boys scored 10 points higher on the SAT than girls in mathematics as far back as 1967. In 2020, the gap was 15 points, but it has been as high as 41 points.

Phyllis Rosser, the researcher who first reported on the gender gap in Ms. Magazine, also pointed out that a disparity exists on the SAT's reading samples, where girls often score lower than boys. Girls' main edge on the SAT has long been the writing part of the verbal section, where they sometimes score up to 14 points higher than boys, she found. Rosser, whose work on the subject grew into a book, "The SAT Gender Gap," discussed her research before the U.S. House Judiciary Committee, arguing that girls of color are penalized by college entrance exams. Many girls of color not only contend with a gender gap on the SAT but also a racial gap, one that remains a problem, with Black and Latinx students scoring lower than their White and Asian American counterparts, particularly in math.

The overall advantage that boys have on the SAT can also be found on the preliminary scholastic assessment test (PSAT), the shorter, similar test students take ahead of the SAT. PSAT scores determine the winners of the highly competitive National Merit Scholarship and have had similar gender disparities. "For decades, boys scored so much higher than girls that two out of three Merit semifinalists were male," according to Sadker and Zittleman.

DO TEST FORMATS AND STEREOTYPES CONTRIBUTE TO THE GENDER GAP?

Some researchers have attributed gender performance disparities on standardized tests to the fact that these tests are timed and have multiple choice formats. Research published in 2018 in the Educational Researcher found that test format accounted for about 25 percent of the gender gaps in state- and district-level achievement tests given to 8 million elementary and middle school students nationwide.

According to Sadker and Zittleman, boys might have the edge on multiple choice tests because they're more likely to guess when they don't know an answer. In contrast, girls tend to skip answering questions they're unsure are correct and heed test instructions that say they'll lose points for wrong answers. Comparable data does not exist for trans, nonbinary and gender nonconforming students.

The multiple-choice format isn't the only disadvantage girls face on standardized tests. A 2019 study published in Nature found that the gender gap on math and science tests closes when women are given more time to complete assessments. Timed tests may also increase test anxiety, a problem that has a greater effect on women's scores on high-stakes assessments.

Additionally, women test-takers may experience a phenomenon called "stereotype threat."

"That's the notion that if you are in a high-stakes kind of situation like the SAT, you are afraid of living up to a stereotype, like women aren't good at math," Steven G. Brint, a distinguished professor of sociology and public policy at the University of California, Riverside, told The 19th. "You sort of lose your composure, and the whole idea of stereotype threat kind of hovering above you as you take the test could lead to a lack of confidence, lack of focus, fear of living up to the stereotype."

WHAT ABOUT THE ACTUAL QUESTIONS?

Some SAT critics say there are problems with the SAT's content, such as reading passages that lack women characters or describe activities stereotypically associated with men. The College Board said it takes measures to prevent gender bias from surfacing on the tests, telling The 19th that its test development process includes "numerous rigorous reviews."

"All passages and test questions undergo content and fairness reviews by internal and external experts from diverse backgrounds," the College Board said in a statement. "As part of the test development process, item statistics are analyzed to identify potential bias based on a number of characteristics of the test-taking population, including gender."

The College Board said it analyzes any differences in performance that may not be achievement-related among groups of students.

But these steps don't necessarily eliminate bias, said Schaeffer, who is concerned about the test including questions that resonate more with boys than with girls. When boys did not perform as well on reading passages, for example, test officials added more references to sports, politics and business, FairTest complained in the 1990s. Yet, comparable moves weren't made to help girls perform better on the math section.

Schaeffer argues that systematic discrimination based on race, gender and other factors are baked into the testing process. His main objection, though, is the use of standardized testing to determine students' futures. Over the past decade, companies such as Google, McKinsey and Goldman Sachs have all asked job applicants for their test scores at some point.

"That your college-going talent is based on answering multiple choice questions in rapid fire is an underlying assumption that has a sexist bias," Schaeffer said. "In addition, there have been a number of publications that have essentially said, 'We don't know why there's a gender gap, but it's there and it's pervasive.'"

“ The SAT test and other standardized tests claim that their value is in predicting college grades. Despite the fact that young women get lower scores on the test than young men, they earn higher grades when matched for identical courses in college than the boys.”

—Bob Schaeffer, Executive director of FairTest: National Center for Fair & Open Testing

WHAT ARE THE CONSEQUENCES OF THE SAT GENDER GAP?

Advocates for changes in standardized testing say the SAT gender gap can have long-term effects on girls. It can affect which scholarships they receive and, in some cases, stop them from attending a selective college entirely. Sara Harberson, a former college admissions officer, dean of admissions and director of college counseling, told The 19th that colleges have often set minimum SAT scores for admissions.

"The SAT has been a great influencer in college admissions because it is a very quick way for an admissions officer to know how competitive a student is in the applicant pool," said Harberson, now CEO and founder of Application Nation, which helps parents navigate the college admissions process. "Even before I would read an application, I knew that if a student did not have a certain SAT score, they simply were not going to be admitted regardless of what else was in the application."

Colleges and universities have long recognized that test scores don't necessarily predict a student's academic performance. Still, some higher education institutions rely on the SAT to bulk up the number of men in their student body, Harberson said, because more women than men apply.

"The colleges aren't going to go out of their way to say, well, 'This young woman is so incredible, and even though her test scores are a little bit lower, let's admit her anyway,'" she said. "There are higher expectations for those girls because there are so many of them in the applicant pool."

For students interested in pursuing certain careers and graduate school programs, their SAT scores might come into play again, cutting them off from potential opportunities, test critics say. The gender gap might also be used by some to double down on gender stereotypes and suggest that girls and women simply aren't cut out for STEM careers.

WHAT'S THE SAT'S FUTURE?

A number of colleges have already moved away from requiring the test. Bowdoin College in Maine stands out for going test-optional back in 1969, making it a very early trendsetter. Franklin & Marshall College in Pennsylvania was also a leader in this trend, establishing a test-optional admissions process for select students in 1992 and then everyone in 2006.

"This policy was created because, decades ago, F&M recognized that a student's academic performance in high school was a far better predictor for how they would perform in the college classroom," said Jimmie Foster, vice president for enrollment management, in a statement to The 19th. "Particularly, when compared to their performance on a test on a random Saturday morning."

A test-optional future for most colleges and universities could reduce the barriers girls experience during the admissions process. But Harberson said that colleges aren't dropping the admissions requirement for selfless reasons. School officials noticed that scrapping the entrance exam requirements resulted in an increase in applications, especially from underrepresented students, Harberson said. Selective institutions strive to get as many applicants as possible, she added, and the rise in applications can help them diversify their student bodies.

"I can't imagine any college that cares about application totals and diversity going back to requiring the test," Harberson said. "The vast majority are going to be staying test-optional."

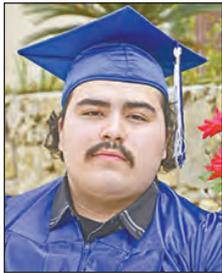

FairTest estimates that 1,800 colleges and universities are currently test-optional, compared with just over 100 three decades ago.

Given the gender and other biases associated with the SAT, Harberson has just one question about this shift: "Why did it take this long?"
